reckoned some respectable contributions to the cause of Slavery has been a sad stroke to our cause. Even Napoleon thought not so fatal to it as American and English divines as he, at least, does theoretically acknowledge it (see essay on Jamaica) to be the mission of Christianity to abolish Slavery, as still a terrible nightmare upon Freedom. In a pecuniary point of view, the very sums which would have been sent from hence to the Am. Soc. have been necessarily absorbed to seek the fortunes of the exiled from Scarnation. I would delight to hear from Mrs Stowe of the immense & continually increasing circulation of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" in America England & its commercial to do a great work. Even they clear so much towards Colonization, but trust this cleanse will not be pursued so readily by others as by me. I depend to hear from you shortly and you in a postscript & then maybe is willing to circulate Mrs Stowe's Dred & Jerusalem but without sacrificing a single word except this
